The Restorative Approach

When children have disagreements we support them to work through their issues calmly by asking each of them:

1. What has happened?
2. How were you feeling?

We then clarify each child's feelings, and ask each of them:

What do you think needs to happen now to make things better?

Where they are capable, we encourage children to think of a solution themselves. Often this might be a solution we may not have suggested ourselves, e.g. they might decide they want to go and play with different friends.

We then support the solution for both children.

With this approach we are seeing all the children becoming more independent, solving more problems themselves and showing increasing awareness of their own and others' feelings.

Ditching the Dummy!

Well done to those parents who have managed to "Ditch the dummy" over Christmas! If your child hasn't managed to yet, why not give it a try? It is so much better for children's speech and language development not to be talking through a dummy, and will help their teeth grow in better too.
